Location betw. Redmond & Camden on the west side of Almaden Expressway, San Jose

Description:

J. Mondo's tank house was built in 1920. The Mondos moved to Almaden district about 1915 where he worked in the mine.

This tank house is just as it was since being built, except that the tank has been removed. The well was where Almaden Expressway is now and the water was pumped to the tank. They had no windmill. The tank house was used as a chicken breeder. Deer horns can be seen mounted on the tank house.

The large redwood tree that can be seen in one of the pictures came from Big Sur in 1950 and was a figt to Mrs. Mondo from the Rangers and the Girl Scouts.

Person interviewed: Mrs. Mondo - was the first Girl Scout leader at Almaden School in the late 20's and early 30's.

Location Quimby Rd., near Ruby St., S.J.

Description:

Moore's well preserved water tower has part of a windmill frame attached.

Original owner: Dabel (Dabel's Ranch), 40 acres (apricot and walnut trees)

Known uses: storage and storing water, could store water, but no pump; water pumped from well for household use; living space (underneath).

This was probably the most exciting tank house the girls visited, mainly due to Mr. Moore's enthusiasm about conserving the tank house and tank which is destined for the leveler's ball when an enormous hi-school comes within 3 years. Mr. Moore (a high school teacher at Overfelt), talked to the girls and convinced them that the structure should be saved and moved to the hills two miles away to his proposed property. He let the girls climb clear up the inside through a trap door to set on the roof. Beautifully preserved structure. We wished we could help "save" it.

The present owner Mr. Schnutenhaus said the tankhouse was built by his grandfather who lived under the tank and built a lean-to outside as a bedroom when two sons were born. His father's bride insisted on a house rather than living in a tankhouse. The tank is now dangerous but still holds water. (A metal tank has since replaced the old wooden one.)
The original owner and builder came here from Butcher Street (now known as Army Street) in San Francisco in 1906.

TANKHOUSE

19945 Stevens Creek Blvd.

First grade Brownie Troop 989 discovered this tankhouse on a field trip on February 8, 1977.

The tankhouse is behind the home owned by 94 year old Dominica Torre and her son Vincent.

Mr. Torre told us that his father built the present house in 1921. The tankhouse was there at the time the property was purchased in 1918.

The tankhouse is still in use at the present time. The well is 300 feet deep and the house is used as a shower and wash room.

There was originally a windmill on the tankhouse, but it was removed in 1950.

The home and tankhouse are located on three acres of land containing prune and apricot trees. The land is on Stevens Creek Blvd. between Blaney Ave. and Wolf Road.

The pictures were taken on our troop field trip by troop leader, Sharon Bennett - 996-1282.

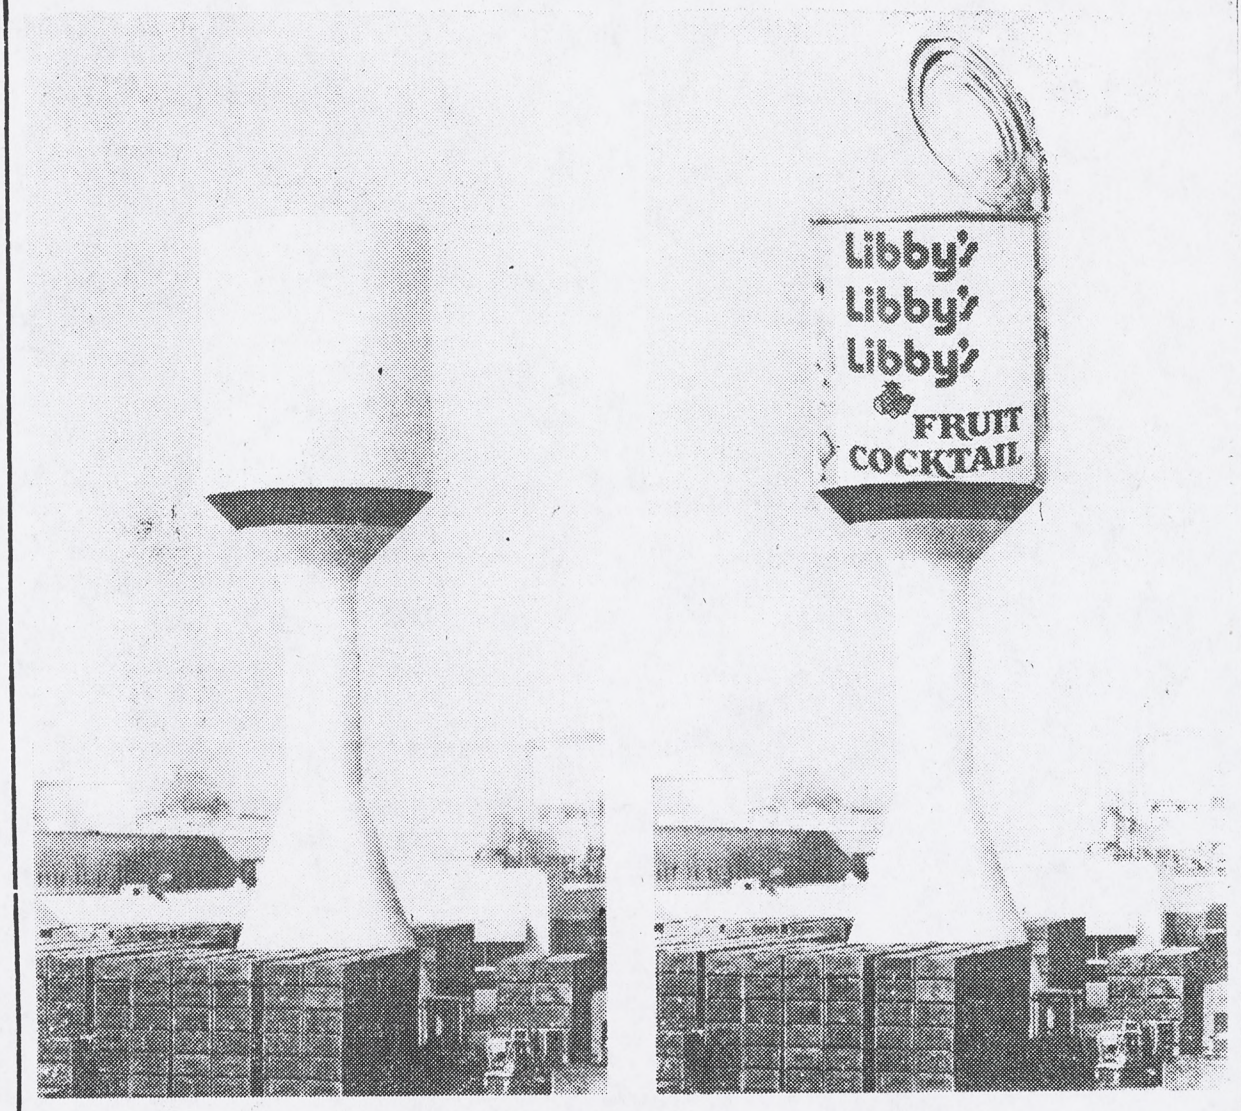
Description: Libby McNeill & Libby Cannery water tower Sunnyvale

[redacted]

SAN JOSE NEWS, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 4, 1976 ★★★



Photographer's license

They're going to paint the all-white Libby's Cannery water tower in Sunnyvale to look like a can of the company's fruit cocktail but News Staff Photographer Jim Geiger couldn't wait. He used a little sleight of camera to produce the "how it will look" shot, even including the jagged can lid which Libby's does not intend to duplicate. The water tower carried a pop art fruit cocktail paint job until 1973 and now, after a three year hiatus, the City Planning Commission agreed to the new paint job.

Migrant housing

Long before cannery and farm workers' unions came into existence, transient employee housing was an established fact in Santa Clara County. Big canneries such as Libby, McNeill & Libby of Sunnyvale and Pratt-Low of Santa Clara furnished neat cottages for employees who returned summer after summer. Their modest rentals or fees varied from locality to locality and from company to company.

Occupants of the cottages shown in this winter photo, taken in the 1920's, worked for Libby, McNeill & Libby. Many of them had good homes elsewhere in the state, but on coming to Sunnyvale for the canning season, they stayed here until the last can of fruit came off the conveyor belt.

Note the neat window trim, porch railing and hip roof on each of these structrues—also the abundant trees for summer shade.

Huge stacks of picking lugs, covered for winter, almost block from view the main cannery building in the background.
